He began mixing in 2015. Pigliapoco is widely known for his work closely associated artists Chris Brown.^[1] Gunna, Nicki Minaj, Young Thug, Jacquees among others.

Patrizio "Teezio" Pigliapoco is a Grammy-nominated recording engineer as well as record producer, mixing engineer, and vocal producer based in Los Angeles, California. A California native, born and raised in Simi Valley to Argentinian immigrants, Patrizio started playing bass at the age of 10. At 18 years old, while attending LA Recording School, Patrizio accepted the position as Juicy J's recording engineer.

These early opportunities allowed him to expedite the honing of his craft, both in the classroom and in real studio sessions with a Grammy-nominated artist. At 21 years old, Patrizio signed a publishing deal with BMG and Venus Brown who mentored him on the art of vocal producing and engineering A level artists. Patrizio has since become widely known as one of the fastest recording engineers in music today. The culmination of these experiences opened many doors for Patrizio to expand his clientele and position himself as one of the top recording engineers in the industry. He has since gone on to work with Chris Brown, Fergie, will.i.am, Justin Bieber, Future, Nicki Minaj, Jhene Aiko, Usher, Prince Royce, DJ

Khaled, Diddy, Gucci Mane, Young Thug, Rick Ross, Rich The Kid, Lil Dicky, Busta Rhymes, and many more. Currently, Patrizio is Chris Browns full time recording and mixing engineer.

Pigliapoco received his first Grammy award nomination in 2019 for Five Album. [3] because of his label Sony Music.[4] Includes collaboration with Chris Brown which was released on October 26, 2017, and reaches top spot Billboard Latin album charts. In early 2019, Pigliapoco was nominated for a Latin Grammy award.
