Los Angeles, Nov 20, 2020 (Issuewire.com) - Tashell Williams has been making a positive impact throughout this pandemic even though it is inconveniencing small businesses. COVID-19 has not slowed down her determination one bit. Tashell is the founder of 2 businesses, a vegan based brand called “Cadence Taylor Organic Beauty” and her beauty salon “Euphoric Essence Salon”. Tashell stands for health, wellness, and clean beauty. She is a survivor. Dealing with the loss of one of her lungs has really shifted her focus on the wellness of not only herself but for others.

She states “Did you know the ingredients in most beauty products are toxic? Did you know the air inside of your home or business is more toxic than outside? If you know better, you do better!”. Absolutely, if more individuals were knowledgeable on this topic they would definitely take a second look at the ingredient labels on products. Tashell is a one lung survivor, mother, wife, salon owner, hair expert, public speaker, cert. wellness coach and educator. She dedicates her life to her work and bettering those in and around her community. After almost losing her life her mission became very clear.

Tashell searched for ways to preserve her remaining lung and came across the long list of companies using toxic chemicals in their products and it became overwhelming. Henceforth creating “Cadence Taylor Organic Beauty”. She started with detoxing the toxicity in her environment and now focuses on purifying the body with clean products. Discontinuing the uses of harsh products not only help the body, but also the mind. On her website you can find a list of services she provides along with outstanding testimonials of her past clients.

You can also reach out and contact her if you wish to learn more about what it is she offers, but let's not forget about her salon. “Euphoric Essence Salon”. As a little girl, Tashell has always dreamed of owning a hair salon. She has always loved the experience of being in a salon and being around the “Euphoric Essence” that a salon brings. Although owning a salon as a child was a dream she did not think it would happen. Being a single mother and needing to provide as much as she could almost push her right behind the salon chair against her will. This venture was extra help at a difficult time and she had the talent to turn this into a business and did just that.

Once this pandemic slows down she will be able to open up her business doors again. This pandemic has caused a lot of businesses that are non-essential to close their doors to the public. Tashell misses her salon and clients and cannot wait to be back at the shop. Nevertheless, she must keep expanding and growing and that's what she is currently focused on. Her business ethic speaks for itself. It will only be a matter of time before you hear Tashell Williams as a household name.
