

Click McGhee, LLC - All Eyes on Alabama Agriculture

Birmingham, Dec 20, 2020 (Issuewire.com) - Most recent clients include: Ropir International, The Alabama Cannabis Industry Association, and The Alabama Hemp Growers Association.

Click-McGhee has acted as a liaison to Ropir International, a Panamanian Consultancy Firm, specializing in International Agricultural Development Initiatives. Recent proposal facilitations included: Licensed International Hemp and Medical Cannabis Cultivation Initiative and the Midwest Wind Energy Infrastructure Initiative.

As for the two new Associations, both organizations were founded by Executive Director, Chey Garrigan. Chey, a multifaceted, multitalented business woman in the state of Alabama saw this Industry opportunity and opportunity for economic development was something she could not take a back seat on.

Chey is a registered lobbyist in Alabama as well as in DC. Garrigan has been blazing trails since this conversation took off. Both organizations hold a 501c6 status.

Finally, Click-McGhee has a family relationship and partnership with Rigsby-McGhee Farm Foundation's (RMFF), an Alabama Agricultural Advocacy Charity focused primarily on the cattle Sector of Agriculture. Primary focuses include . . . infrastructural deficits, exploited markets, lack of market access and mega industry antitrust violations imposed by the meat packing industry. In addition RMFF has worked to promote and organize coordinated input and alliance building. Other interest of RMFF include Wind Energy, Irrigation, Cannabis and Hemp Cultivation, and Soil Health.

Click-McGhee is also representing a startup cattle equipment producer located in North Georgia. This venture seeks to provide a progressive alternative to cattle working infrastructure and design. Conversations have also started regarding a potential breed association contract. Details will be released January 2021.
