

Harrisco Builds A Partnership With Researcher, A Global Academic Research Information Platform

Signed MOU on December 1...synergy between research paper editing service and research information platform service is expected

Seoul, Dec 14, 2020 (IssueWire.com) - Korea's leading academic editing and translation service brand, Harrisco (<http://en.harrisco.net>) signed MOU with Researcher, a global academic research information platform of the U.K. on December 1.

The partnership will allow Korean and Asian scientists and researchers easy access to global research information of Researcher and Harrisco's SCI-journal English editing and translation services. With this collaboration, Harrisco envisions developing a "Total Researcher Platform" that provides one-stop assistance to scientists and researchers.

Researcher that is gaining increasing popularity as a platform of global academic research information offers a discovery platform enabling professors and researchers to keep up-to-date with latest research information. Founded in 2017, Researcher has 1.8 million members who are scientists and researchers worldwide, and operates a system allowing members an access to latest articles published on over 17,000 overseas journals.

As one-third of members are from Asian region, synergy will be greater as Harrisco has grown itself as an Asia's top professional service brand in academic editing and translation.
