Recently, Sickarone set out to release a brand new studio single titled To You, which also features 1403. Straight out of Turin, Sickarone is a skilled beat-maker and music producer with a sharp creative focus. His exploration revolves around dusty samples, swollen beats and deep basslines, exploring different sonic aesthetics in the context of hip-hop, jungle, footwork and so on...His partnership with London artist/producer 1403 is a spot-on match, given the latter's affinity for a wide variety of sounds as well. The pair struck gold on this collaboration, channeling their kaleidoscopic backgrounds into something relevant and spontaneous, touching down on abstract electronics and neo-soul borders.

This single sets the bar quite high, channeling the artist's ability to combine tasteful arrangements with spontaneous lyrics and melodies that will immediately connect with listeners on a deeper level. The single immediately charms with a soothing and atmospheric sound. However, it is not just an ethereal, dreamy composition. The track immediately stands out due to its non-linear drum pattern, which perfectly locks in with the ethereal soundscapes and field recordings that surface here and there throughout the composition. The vocals are introspective and personal, yet dynamic and rhythmically tied to the beat. The bass is understated yet deep and sultry, contributing to the song's motion. There is room for a lot of energy, and the impact of the production is hard to deny. Any fan of artists like Nosaj Thing, Toro Y Moi, Flying Lotus, and J Dilla will appreciate the nuances in Sickarone's tracks. This is a great introduction to the world and creativity of this inspired (and inspiring) beat-maker, and a great taste of what he is able to accomplish with his eclectic taste. Today, genre definitions are becoming increasingly blurred and Sickarone productions consistently shine a fresh light on the more boombastic niche of electronic music.
