Modular offices are an inexpensive and straightforward means to isolate operation areas from distractions and noise in a warehouse-type environment. Protecting employees from harmful truck fumes, inclement weather, and creates a distraction-free environment. Modular offices also offer more precise and economic climate control by offering thermally insulated walls and HVAC systems. Now, modular offices provide an even more critical feature making a business more socially distanced during COVID-19.

A Beneficial Business Investment for Social Distancing

As states are inching closer to another lockdown restriction, similar to the one the country faced in Spring 2020, a business's success and its employees' health and safety need to maintain social distance guidelines to remain open. Modular offices may be the key that your business needs. With modular offices being constructed and installed at about 25% of the time it takes to complete traditional construction, it's a time-saving and economical option, and Tennessee Rack can help from start to finish.
