

Amazon (a love song), A Satirical Parody by Wendy Rosoff

Mandatory Lockdown Inspires Creative Expression from Hollywood Actress

California, Los Angeles, Jan 28, 2021 (IssueWire.com) - Entertainer, writer and self-described “Amazon-oholic” Wendy Rosoff stars in her own musical parody video celebrating the joys of online shopping during a pandemic. Amazon (a love song) is a satirical parody of Xanadu, a video that stems from two things: her love of all things 80’s and slowly going “bananas” over the past few months due to California’s mandatory lockdown.

“My video Amazon is a love letter to my obsession with purchasing my entire life online during this pandemic.” Says Rosoff, “When the stay-at-home order first began, I showed some restraint, but as weeks turned to months I leaned in hard and embraced my true love, AMAZON with wide open arms.”

This Broadway veteran (Tony award-winning revival of 42nd St., A Christmas Carol, The Leading Ladies of Broadway) whose TV credits include the upcoming Rutherford Falls (Peacock), The Good Place, Veep, Fresh of the Boat, and Shameless among others, Wendy details some of the whackiest items she’s actually ordered on the beloved e-commerce site. Additionally, Rosoff worked hard to utilize her newfound audio producing and editing skills that were essential in creating this labor love.

It is Wendy’s hope that this satirical love song set to the melody of ’80s hit Xanadu will resonate with all of those attempting to safely and sanely live their best lives from home, just one click away from anything they could possibly desire.
