

California Homeowners May Qualify for Free Solar Panels

Irvine, Jan 12, 2021 (IssueWire.com) - The state of California has the mandate to get fifty percent of its energy from local renewable resources (water, wind, solar).

Currently, California is shipping in much of its energy from out-of-state. Consumers can see the high fees sometimes listed as 'delivery charges' on their monthly electricity bills. Shipping and delivery charges can often range from thirty to fifty percent of the monthly electric bill.

California residents can see if their home qualifies for a No out-of-pocket cost solar savings program.

There is no loan, no lease, no financing, and no renting of the panels. If the house qualifies, the panels are installed at no cost and the house receives a lower flat savings rate. All maintenance and monitoring are included, along with a roof warranty.

Some of the qualifications include Homeowner, Roof type and condition, Electrical panel, internet, etc.

Savings are made possible as there are no out-of-state shipping costs involved with the program as the clean renewable energy is generated on-site (the roof).

California Homeowners can also contact references of consumers using the program.
