So You Want to Learn To Draw? Learning how to draw is definitely not an easy task.

It takes tons of focus and a proper way of looking at the world.

There is no substitute for hard work but as with all disciplines, better instruction can lead to better results.

Who doesn't want to learn drawing in less time with better results?

Even with the greatest art tutorials ever invented you can expect your drawing education to take years to fully develop!

Well, we had better get started then! Can Drawing Be learned?

“I don’t have any artistic talent” is the common complaint.

I truly believe anybody can learn to draw. I couldn’t call myself a drawing instructor if I didn’t believe this, could I?

Aside from extreme physical handicaps, we all have pretty much the same physical capabilities when it comes to art-making.

We’re not talking about playing a professional sport here.

We can all hold a pencil and move it properly with some proper guidance.

You have all the same muscles and bones that Leonardo Da Vinci had.

So why can’t I draw well? What’s the problem?

Learning to Draw as an Adult After reading the last section about children practicing long hours to get good at drawing you might be feeling hopeless.

Don’t

I think it’s common knowledge that getting a head start in anything puts you at an advantage, but don’t despair.

You can learn to draw. You just have to start now. Not later!

ON EASY DRAWING FOR BEGINNERS I TEACH

Anatomy and perspective - I will help you understand Anatomy features and how to draw characters from multiple camera perspectives/angles.

Proportions - I will help you draw characters/scenes with better proportions (with a better ratio between features)

Coloring and shading - I will teach you how to instinctively shade and how to color your drawing properly.

self-learning - I will help you learn how to learn things by yourself so you will be able to improve without me^-^

Note that I ONLY teach through discord, zoom, skype, and facebook-messenger!
