

Harry Coumnas; a Lookalike of Albert Einstein from Norway

This Press Release is written to inform the readers about Harry Coumnas who is a lookalike of Albert Einstein.

New York, New York City, Jan 25, 2021 (IssueWire.com) - In one of the largest gatherings of Albert Einstein lookalikes that took place in NYC last Sunday, Harry Coumnas, a 100 years old man from Norway caught the attention of most people due to his uncanny resemblance with Einstein. Not only does he look like a great physicist, but also has many habits that studies suggest the latter had. Like Einstein, Coumnas too likes to sail and play the violin. The resemblance between the two is so much that Harry has been mistaken as the ghost of Einstein by many in the past. It is also surprising that like Einstein, he likes to keep his hair uncombed, and doesn't like to wear socks no matter the occasion or season.

However, one of the most shocking things that have nothing to do with Harry Coumnas' appearance is his deep knowledge of physics in spite of not having been to school ever in his life. He lost his parents at the age of three during an unfortunate accident and stayed with his old aunt in a small village in Norway. He never got the chance to go to school due to poor educational facilities in the village. However, with his strong observation & brilliant mind, he started to discover and create innovative things right from a young age.

About Harry Coumnas

Harry Coumnas is a lookalike of Albert Einstein, who was one of the most influential physicists of the twentieth century and is best known for developing the general theory of relativity. Coumnas caught the attention of people during a gathering of Albert Einstein lookalikes in New York City last week.

Media Contact

Harry Coumnas

jojovew214@1adir.com

Source : Harry Coumnas

See on IssueWire