

New documentary looks at spiritual aspects of tattoo culture

United Kingdom, London, Feb 23, 2021 (Issuewire.com) - 'Eternal Ink: Tattoos from the Spirit Worlds,' is now available on Amazon Prime Video. Filmed over 8 years, director Maellyn Macintosh sets off on an epic journey to meet some of the last traditional tattoo artists, healers and shamans who still keep the traditions alive.

The film is available to stream, rent or buy in English speaking regions on Amazon Prime Video:
<https://www.amazon.com/Eternal-Ink-Tattoos-Spirit-Worlds/dp/B08RF11M32>

The trailer can also be seen here: <https://vimeo.com/48473005>

From the tattooed woman of the Indian jungle to shape-shifting shamans and tattoos of supernatural power and protection, 'Eternal Ink' offers a rare glimpse into worlds not often seen. Spanning four continents and many remote locations, this is also a personal journey for Maellyn as she receives her own tattoos and begins to understand what is at the core of some of the oldest known tattoo traditions.

Although tattoos have become mainstream in recent times, and anyone can choose a design that takes their fancy, this wasn't always the case. In fact, the oldest tattoos had very specific uses and were at the heart of many spiritual and healing traditions.

The film explores tattoos as a vehicle of culture and offers a unique perspective on the hard-wiring of the human brain, and the link between spiritual practices and tattoo designs.

Tattoo anthropologist Dr. Lars Krutak (aka TattooHunter), makes an appearance, explaining the surprisingly effective medical technologies inherent in many indigenous tattoos.

'Eternal Ink' will also be available soon on Tubi, PlayNow Media, Vidi Space and Occultrama.

The film was directed by Maellyn, who also wrote, produced, presented, filmed and edited it. She composed most of the soundtrack. Two songs by Dubai musician Nina Oud are also featured.

For more information please view the Press Kit here: <https://www.maellyn.com/eternal-ink-documentary>

Maellyn is a South African born filmmaker with a passion for documenting extraordinary lives, customs and cultures. Her work seeks to unlock the mysteries of ancestral wisdom for the modern world and to inspire understanding and respect between all communities, and for the world, we live in. She is no stranger to remote locations and unusual subjects.

Summary

'Eternal Ink: Tattoos from the Spirit Worlds,' is now available on Amazon Prime Video and coming soon to Tubi, Vidi Space, PlayNow Media and Occultrama. From the tattooed woman of the Indian jungle to shape-shifting shamans and tattoos of supernatural power and protection, 'Eternal Ink' offers a rare glimpse into worlds not often seen. Filmed over 8 years, director Maellyn Macintosh sets off on an epic journey to meet some of the last traditional tattoo artists, healers and shamans who still keep the traditions alive.

Media Contact

Maellyn Macintosh

maellynmac@gmail.com

+34 631148732

Source : Eternal Ink: Tattoos from the Spirit Worlds

See on IssueWire