

NSI Educator to provide training to Nail Technicians

Nail Technicians have a unique opportunity to win business by showcasing their work on social media. If you are scared to start, take a course to upgrade your skills.

Demerara-Mahaica, Georgetown, Feb 3, 2021 (Issuewire.com) - Lexann McPhoy will provide training classes themed, "Secrets of International Nail Technicians," starting on Tuesday, February 16, 2021. Lexann is a Certified NSI global Educator and proprietor of the popular Lexann's Nail Creations.

The training is designed for beginners through experienced nail technicians who like to learn new things.

The refresher and advance classes are 15 hours over 5 days, while beginners will receive 30 hours of training over 10 days.

All participants will learn about selecting e-file bits, different application methods, acrylic sculpting techniques, and simple but eye-catching designs.

Good Nail Technicians are in high demand! The employment of manicurists and pedicurists is projected to grow 19 percent from 2020 to 2029, much faster than the average for all occupations.

“In our industry, education, and professionalism is a challenge. Many students spend time on courses that don’t teach them the basics of anatomy, tools, application, and business operations,” says McPhoy. “When I teach students about nail structure and growth, and show where the matrix is, or explain the reasons their clients got nail infections, they look at me in awe. My training delivers value on an international level,” she added.

Participants will experience the versatile and universal line of the most popular NSI products. The research and development department of NSI has been advancing technology for the professional-only nail market for more than 30 years.

NSI is committed to creating time-saving, cost-effective products, enabling professionals to work more efficiently and profitably. The NSI products used in the training are distributed by Etrog Enterprises, Inc.
