Subplot Entertainment, LLC begins development on mini-series based on Poker.

California, Los Angeles, Feb 17, 2021 (Issuewire.com) - Subplot Entertainment, LLC, a multimedia production company, has entered development on the mini-series, “Flushed”.

Flushed takes place during the golden age of online poker. It follows a pair of young players from their humble beginnings to their rapid ascent into the professional poker world. The series aims to bridge the gap between old and new, presenting poker in a light never before seen on television.

The series is executive produced by Andrew De Jesus Maldonado, produced by Luis Carlos Salgado, and Directed by John Ros, who are known for their work on Group Nine Media's People Be Like and Send Foodz, as well as Amazon's Ragneron and Rich Africans. The series is penned by Shan Harris, an award-winning screenwriter, known for Rabbit Island and Co-Hab.

“There’s never been a show quite like this, we’ve combined so many different elements and ideas into this project. It will truly be a fresh, fun take on something familiar.” John Ros commented.

Subplot Entertainment was founded in 2013. Since then, they have created countless projects ranging anywhere from podcasts to award-winning films. Their clientele consists of companies like Warner Media, Top Dawg Entertainment, and Discovery Inc. In 2020, they announced the development of their feature film, “The Knock”.

According to recent research, there are over 100 million people that play poker globally and 60 million of those are in the US alone. From 2002 to 2013 poker doubled in popularity year after year. Currently, the interest in online poker is higher than ever due in part to the ongoing pandemic.

“I cannot express how excited we are to share this project with everyone. ” Andrew De Jesus Maldonado stated.

Updates will be forthcoming.
