1. What is TRON (TRX)?

TRON is a decentralized virtual machine that was built to help usher in the decentralized internet. Similarly to Ethereum, TRON enables Dapp developers to create and utilize complex protocols via smart contracts that live on its native blockchain. Today the platform is best known for its transaction speeds and its lively CEO. Specifically, the platform is capable of 2000 transactions per second. This performance puts TRX on par with major payment processors such as PayPal. Best of all, TRON has zero transaction fees. You can send a million dollars in TRX to anywhere in the world in seconds and never have to pay a fee.

To grasp the monumental task TRON's developers seek to take on, it's crucial to understand a little about the decentralized internet. The decentralized internet differs from the internet you are used to in some key ways. Primarily, there are no hosting companies. Instead, the entire internet is run by personal users.

2.What is a smart contract?

Smart contracts are a self-operating computer program that automatically executes when specific conditions are met. With smart contracts, you can share anything of value, among strangers in a conflict-free transparent way. You can also think of smart contracts as a Blockchain based vending machine. Just like a vending machine are configured to take in dollars to dispense your choice of item, smart contracts use ether as a fuel to execute code based on pre-configured rules.

3.What is Genesis Game?
