

Netflix's 'Deadly Illusions' Mary Morrison In The Flesh

Real Life New York Times Best Selling Author Sees Her Identity Stolen in Netflix's New Film Deadly Illusions

Georgia, Atlanta, Mar 31, 2021 (Issuewire.com) - On Tuesday, March 18, 2021, Netflix debuted Deadly Illusions, an American thriller drama, written and directed by Anna Elizabeth James and starring Kristin Davis, Dermot Mulroney, Greer Grammer, and Shanola Hampton.

Kristen Davis, who plays the character Mary Morrison, a best-selling author of salacious thriller novels, is happily married with two young children. Her publisher asks her to write another book and offers her a two-mil advance; she initially declines but later accepts after her husband reveals his risky gambling investment. Suffering from writer's block, Mary seeks to hire a nanny to help with the kids while she writes, and, after a number of bad interviews, she employs Grace. From there the line between fiction and reality starts to blur.

In Atlanta, Georgia coincidentally resides a similarly real-life character, Mary Morrison. Morrison, New York Times Best Selling author of 29 books, mother, and breast cancer survivor held a small viewing of the movie and could not help noticing grave similarities between her and the character played by Kristen Davis.

"The film felt like a direct feature from my life and career as an author. I'm a New York Times Best Selling author, who writes salacious thrillers, who faced the challenges of a young child during my career, always on a deadline from my publishers, and of course, my name is Mary Morrison. Is this film about me? Maybe. There is so much of me in the character, said Morrison."

"I give the film rave reviews and hope to meet the writer one day to explore where the character's name and plot were inspired from. I have 26 novels; I'll be more than happy to work with their team to bring my books to life. We can start with The Rich Girls Club, Sweeter Than Honey, or Head Games."
