

United Public Adjusters (UPA) offers assistance to Restaurants

New York, Mechanicville, Mar 19, 2021 (Issuewire.com) - With the continuation of the Covid-19 pandemic, many restaurants and food establishments are suffering significant financial losses. United Public Adjusters (UPA) has announced a new program, the Restaurant Rescue Program (RRP) to assist restaurant owners and food establishments in recovering financial stability during these challenging times. The RRP offers free inspections to restaurants and food establishments. UPA also provides representation to recover funds that restaurant owners and food establishments are entitled to receive for recent damages. The RRP also includes a full policy review and execution strategy for business losses associated with the challenges many business owners currently face.

Peter Guzzi, the founder of UPA, says of the program, “our mission is to protect the policyholder and assist our communities by bringing awareness and education to those in need.”

The public adjusters with UPA work for restaurant owners and food establishments in order to recover entitled funds for restoration to pre-loss conditions after recent damages. Public adjusters handle everything from start to finish, including communications with insurance companies, so that restaurant owners can focus on their business.
