What Abhay said in his books

" I was raised in Jammu and worked in Delhi and Mumbai with production houses. Working on novels has helped me perceive the unusual," says Abhay on how he came to tell the short stories in his book that were first written as fun and bedtime stories for family and friends.

"The idea to write first struck on 5 April, when I went into lockdown. The book has lived its own journey since. I never thought of it as a physical book", says Abhay adding that he wrote 2 more novels, in which one is dwelling on nearly every aspect of the lockdown.

The ideas, written in the early months of lockdown, strangely seemed to have predicted the future, especially some of the terms that crowd our vocabulary now. "A lot of the ideas came from reading the tomes. Fact and fiction merged," he says, adding that when he wrote his story he wasn't sure, about the risks of being get failed.

Written in between work from home, the book begins with the chapter, The Orglud Box.
