In both oral and overall health, prevention is the best medicine. Therefore, the primary focus of family dental care is preventing dental diseases from developing in the first place. Besides brushing and flossing the teeth every day, professional dental cleanings and exams help stop the development of bacteria-rich plaque. Other procedures, such as root canals, fillings, crown and bridges, wisdom teeth extractions, etc., can also help manage existing issues before they worsen.

Alongside her clinical role, Dr. Resendiz serves as a Clinical Assistant Professor within the Division of Oral and Craniofacial Health Sciences at the UNC Adams School of Dentistry in Chapel Hill.

The Division of Oral and Craniofacial Health Sciences encompasses the faculty, research fellows, and visiting scholars who generate new knowledge in the basic, applied, and clinical sciences, health services, health policy, and health education. Together, this team of researchers discovers ways to improve oral and overall health and collaborates with investigators at UNC-Chapel Hill, across the country and internationally.

Graduating with her Doctor of Dental Surgery degree from the National University of Mexico in 2000, Dr. Resendiz earned a Diploma from the same educational venue in 2003.

Prosthodontics, also known as dental prosthetics or prosthetic dentistry, is the area of dentistry that focuses on dental prostheses. Prosthodontists specialize in replacing missing teeth and associated oral structures by determining the type of dental prostheses required, having customized dental prostheses manufactured, and fitting them in patients' mouths. They also treat temporomandibular disorders and various issues associated with damaged and problematic teeth.
