

DigitalAkki helping to restart small businesses post Covid-19 Pandemic

Online marketing can help every small business to recover the losses and restart the business post covid-19 pandemic. According to experts, any pandemic can not effect online businesses as compare to offline businesses.

Uttar Pradesh, Noida, Apr 17, 2021 (Issuewire.com) - According to experts, Covid-19 affected 80% more offline businesses as compared to online businesses. Every small and medium business owner should consider these small but important steps if they want to keep alive in the current market.

In India, more than 80% of businesses affected by Covid-19 and facing a huge loss or result to shut down the businesses as well. Offline businesses are only surviving while in this pandemic online businesses are making more revenue. There are many online eCommerce websites from where anybody can purchase daily home needs items, clothes, electronics, and any other products they want. In this lockdown govt allowed all e-commerce and online product delivery companies to deliver the products to their consumers.

But still, in this lockdown, every small offline business and medium offline businesses are closed and unable to deliver or sell any products to consumers. This is the biggest challenge for every offline business nowadays.

The United States is more advanced than us and that's why lockdown is no more affected their daily life. In the United States, every small and medium business is online and serving its services to customers by online mediums like websites, mobile applications, and much more.

If any small business wants to keep alive in the current situation, they need to consider the online marketplace where they can serve their products & services to their consumers.
