British Columbia, Surrey, May 10, 2021 (Issuewire.com) - Countries that don't have universal healthcare have found their prescription prices rising uncontrollably. Many in the U.S. are turning to 90-Day Meds to obtain the prescription medications they need for themselves and their animal companions at affordable prices. Orders are placed online and medications are shipped directly to customers' door without the need for travel or crossing borders for complete convenience.

90-Day Meds is an international prescription referral service (IPR), accepts prescriptions written by U.S. physicians and is a National Care Planning Council Member. All transactions are Norton protected for safety and security. The company fills prescriptions for people and their pets, so there's no need for anyone to risk their health or that of their animal companions due to high prices.

Considered the "best Canadian online pharmacy" as evidenced by the reviews of their many customers, 90-Day Meds works with individuals and their healthcare providers in the U.S. to verify the prescription is genuine for customer safety. Individuals can obtain 90-day supplies of their essential medications and all products are dispensed from licensed pharmacies.

In the U.S., pharmaceutical companies can charge what they want, while costs are controlled by the government in countries with universal health care. The discount prescription drugs available through 90-Day Meds are the same quality name brands and generics as in the U.S. but at less cost.

The same open market system in the U.S. affects pet prescriptions. Individuals can provide the medicines their pets need at substantially lower prices. Customers can search the 90-Day Meds website for needed medications and all orders for pets are vetted by the licensed pharmacy for safety.

Individuals can order medication online, by fax, or via email. Once the prescription has been received and verified, it's filled and mailed directly to the consumers' home. People and their animal companions no longer need to overspend for the medications they need when they can order quality drugs safely and securely from 90-Day Meds.

About 90 Day Meds
