The founder, Charles Kitchens, makes it easy for patients to get the information they need to proceed with a particular service. Not to mention, they accept insurance for most providers, such as Aetna, Medicare, Cigna, Tricare, United Health Care, and BCBS Georgia.

In case you want to do things from home, you can go online to the patient portal, which is easy to use and convenient for getting 24/7 access to your health information. Here are some things you can do on this portal:

- Look at lab results
- Send and receive messages in a secure fashion
- Access your health records
- Book appointments online
- Check out doctors' notes

This is particularly convenient for older patients who may not always have the energy to meet the doctor in person. They can gauge their doctors' notes and get reminders for things, such as their medicines and do things comfortably at home.

Sometimes you need the right program to help you while you're on the go or you're just more comfortable with using a mobile device. Through the healow smartphone app, you'll have access to health records and more.

You're able to manage multiple family accounts uniformly for different health concerns. Set your medication and doctor appointments to help you keep tabs on things. You can also receive messages via text, portal, app, or email.

The TeleVisits feature is perfect for a telemedicine service because you can connect with your doctor in an emergency or just for a quick virtual check-up. It's perfect when you have a break at work or you're at home with your kids.
