

Get Ready to Indulge in Porsche Road Trip's Upcoming Program that is Set to Redefine Primetime Television

California, Los Angeles, May 20, 2021 (Issuewire.com) - Primetime television program Porsche Road Trip, a genre-altering car show that breaks the repetitive formats of traditional car shows recently announced its broadcast premiere on Pluto TV. The new series which is set to transform the way car shows are presented is produced by comedian Adam Carolla's Chassy Media. The new series will take the audience beyond the usual specifications, stats, and burnouts of car-review shows but with a new perspective. The show will be hosted by John Polnik who will travel across the continent in his classic 911. In the course of his journey, he visits celebrities such as legendary Porsche builder Rod Emory and rapper Sir Mix A Lot among others. The show's idea is to covert the pop cultural significance of Porsche into a relatable and fun saga.

The show will encompass and explore some of the undermined people, cars, and places that are directly or remotely associated with the culture that the Porsche universe has set in contemporary times. The exclusive VIP screening for the program will take place at the Art Houz Theater in Las Vegas on Tuesday, May 25th with a private screening of the first two episodes of the series. Some of the names who will be present at the after-screening Q&A discussion include Rod Emory and show host John Polnik.
