Stuart Z. Goldstein was one of the longest serving PR Spokespersons on Wall Street. He served as Managing Director of Corporate Communications & Public Affairs for the Depository Trust & Clearing Corporation (DTCC) in New York, the largest trade clearing house ($5 trillion daily) and central securities depository in the world.

Mr. Goldstein has co-authored two books explaining the inner workings of U.S. Capital Markets, numerous articles in PR trade magazines and his byline on public policy issues has appeared in newspapers, e.g., USA Today, the Washington Times, the Star Ledger, Trenton Times and Global Financial Markets magazine. Mr. Goldstein is a resident at Regency at Monroe.

His first book, “Moe Fields” is a gripping narrative about a father’s fighting spirit and determination to save his family and inspire his sons to succeed. Goldstein applies his gift of storytelling to bring us the story of Moe Fields, growing up during the Great Depression — from his teens as a Golden Gloves boxer, to his career as a bootleg fighter in Brooklyn for money, to being a WWII sailor whose most prideful moment was meeting FDR, to overcoming prejudice and building one of the largest plumbing businesses in New Jersey.

A health crisis hits Moe, and later, a drunk driver causes a horrific car accident, crippling his wife. They are both left to deal with a lifetime of disabilities. But Moe digs deep to turn tragedy into triumph.

We all have our Moe Fields. This treasure of a book is a poignant and thought-provoking memoir that captures the enduring power of role models in our lives. Goldstein has written a life-affirming story that’s hard to put down—and hard not to talk about.

At a time when we need heroes, this book celebrates the strength of family, faith and the enduring legacy we leave our children.

New Jersey, Monroe, May 23, 2021 (Issuewire.com) - Just in time for Father’s Day 2021, a heartwarming new book about fathers and sons

The author is former Wall St Veteran

Pen Paper Press is pleased to announce the release of its first book,

Moe Fields, a gripping narrative about a father's fighting spirit and his determination to save his family and inspire his sons to succeed. The story is a touching tribute to author Stuart Z. Goldstein's late father.

"Goldstein applies his gift of storytelling to bring us Moe Fields, a compelling story about a father's extraordinary work ethic and indomitable spirit in the face of adversity," wrote Andy Polansky, the executive chairman at Weber Shandwick, in the book's Foreword.

Since the e-book was introduced on Amazon in late April, it was ranked in the top 25 of 100 hot new releases on fatherhood and has reached as high as No. 5.

Goldstein tells the story of his father's difficult childhood during the Great Depression. As a teen, Moe Fields is inspired to become a boxer, eventually competing in the 1932 Golden Gloves tournament. He later becomes a bootleg fighter in Brooklyn to make money to support his family. Then, off to WWII as a sailor on a ship used to plan the invasion of southern France and the Yalta conference, where an encounter with FDR leaves a lasting impression.

When a health crisis threatens his life and a drunk driver causes a horrific car accident crippling his wife at 44, Moe digs deep to turn tragedy into triumph. His three sons, who grew up with the trauma of witnessing their parents face uncertainty and suffering, are inspired by Moe's determination.

"As a fighter you understand, everyone gets knocked down," Moe says in the book. "It's what you do at that point which defines your character."

Moe Fields celebrates the strength of family, faith, and the enduring legacy we leave our children — values that are more important than ever during the COVID-19 pandemic, while many folks are far away from family and loved ones.

"We all have our Moe Fields," Polansky writes.

Moe Fields is currently available on Amazon, Barnes & Noble, and other outlets in the U.S., Europe, and Asia as an e-book, paperback, or hardcover book.
