Privacy Battle Of The Decade Made Into An NFT - Available on Mintable

California, Los Angeles, May 19, 2021 (Issuewire.com) - Ambivalent Moxy shares a story of Privacy Battle of the Decade, titled 'Ambivalent Moxy - Apple V FBI', as referred to sources by CNBC and BBC.

In 2016 the FBI tried to order Apple to create a backdoor through its phone encryption, which resulted in a potential court showdown.

The case marked one of the highest-profile clashes in the debate over encryption and data privacy between the government and a technology company. At the time, Apple chief executive Tim Cook called the order "chilling" and said that it would require writing new software that would be "a master key, capable of opening hundreds of millions of locks". Cook's argument was that if the FBI could access this iPhone, nothing would stop them from doing it to many others. Data privacy has been a sensitive topic particularly after revelations by former National Security Agency contractor Edward Snowden about the extent of the government's surveillance activities.

Only available on Mintable, the NFT shows us the pressure CEO of Apple, Tim Cook has placed under.

A large portion of proceeds will go to Ambivalent Moxy's favorite charities to support homeless children, education, and the blind. With their motto of "Think good things, Do good things', Moxy aims to promote working toward understanding one another versus growing hate.
