Why Study in Canada?

Canada is one of the best places to study, which attracts lakhs of students every year. The country provides world-class education at recognized universities. There are specific reasons why students opt for Canada as their dream destination.

- Affordable education
- Innovative research opportunities
- Immigrations hassle-free
- Campus lifestyle
- Health and safety
- International students can often work while they study

Stay back period and work permit post-graduation

- To stay back in the country, a student needs to pursue a course of a minimum of 8 months.
- Less than eight months, of course, will not fetch anything, and the student is not allowed to stay back and apply for a post-graduation work permit.
- A student needs to pursue a more extended period of the course from any recognized university for a work permit.
- Less than two years of course duration can make you eligible for a work permit equivalent to the course.
- If a student pursues education for two years, he/she is eligible for a work permit of 3 years.

Canada Student Visa Financial Requirement 2021

You can apply for a Canada student visa only if you meet the following criteria in general and financial terms:

- The DLI should accept your course application.
- You have to pay for your 1st-year tuition fee that is approximately 22,000 CAD$/year. You can also pay for six months, but paying the complete fees can increase the chances of getting a student visa.
- You have to show that you have an excellent financial background and funds to cover your living expenses and to do so, you will have to open a GIC either from Scotia or ICICI bank.
- The account statement will show the savings for the rest of your term fees.
- You should have zero criminal records and a clean background. The students need to produce a police certificate with the application for a study visa.
- A medical certificate and health checkup that certifies you are fit and healthy.
- During the visa interview, you need to satisfy the officer that you will be back after completing your studies.
