Get to know Certified Registered Nurse Infusion, Amy J. Lancaster, who serves patients in Lutz, Florida.

New York, New York City, Jun 16, 2021 (Issuewire.com) - Described as versatile, compassionate, team-oriented, and results-driven, Amy is a certified registered nurse infusion specializing in adult geriatrics and cardiac care. She works at KH Nursing Services in Lutz, Florida.

KH Nursing Services is proud to be one of the most sought-after nurse staffing coordination agencies in the Southeast and recently expanded across the nation. It works closely with infusion nurses, pharmaceutical companies, and specialty pharmacies to bridge the gap between vetted nurses, hi-tech equipment, intense medications, and patients that are wanting to have their treatments at home, with dignity.

At the start of her academic career, Amy graduated with her Associate of Science in Nursing degree from Excelsior College in 2012. She then went on to earn her Bachelor of Science in Nursing degree from Liberty University in 2018.

Through her experience in nursing, business management, and sales, she has the ability to remain poised and intervene during crises, facilitate excellence in care, and collaborate with multidisciplinary health care teams. Her leadership skills have proven her ability to build positive relationships with patients, family members, physicians, and extended medical professionals.

Attributing her success to perseverance and compassion, Amy is an active member of the Sigma Theta Tau International Honor Society of Nursing, the American Nurses Association, and the American Association of Nurse Practitioners.

A Certified Registered Nurse Infusion (CRNI) is an exceptional nurse who has passed a rigorous exam covering the core areas of infusion nursing. CRNIs stay ahead by being exposed to the newest advances in technology and practice within the infusion nursing specialty. They are part of a global community of elite nurses across multiple disciplines—including home care, pediatrics, oncology, and many more—who have demonstrated through certification that they are the most informed, most highly qualified infusion, nursing specialists.
