

Boxer Angel Luna fights for the vacate WBC featherweight title

New York, Bronx, Jun 8, 2021 (Issuewire.com) - Red-hot featherweight Angel Luna faces upstart Adan Ochoa for vacant WBC featherweight title. Dominican Republic native “El Gato” Angel Luna (21 Professional fights) steps to the plate to face 23-year-old Los Angeles prospect Adan Ochoa (13 Professional Fights) in the main event of CES’ long-awaited return to live-action at historic Cranston Stadium in Cranston, RI. Luna-Ochoa is eight rounds for the vacant WBC USNBC Featherweight Title, streaming live on UFC FIGHT PASS®

“This is truly a dream come true for me. My family and I have sacrificed so much this past year for my boxing career, that hard work pays off. My wife, son, and I spend time in Las Vegas, Florida, and New York training all in one year in hopes to become a better fighter & find a company that would sign me again. These past 30 days we have been living in East Haven Connecticut to train with Trainer Mike Conroy full-time. I’m so thankful for the opportunity that CES has provided and so grateful they have chosen me to be a part of their family”.

Originally Irvin Gonzalez Jr. was going to fight Ochoa but sustained an injury in training camp, Dominican Republic native “El Gato” Angel Luna was a last-minute replacement. Luna comes from three consecutive wins. He recently fought in April and February 2021 winning by unanimous decision. If this is anything like his last three fights there will definitely be a great show on June 19 at Cranston Stebbins Stadium.

Tickets are available online at CESFights.com. To sign up for FIGHT PASS, visit ufcfightpass.com, or download the UFC app. Showtime is noon, followed by the live FIGHT PASS stream at 1 pm.
