Tanzania is home to some of the world's most difficult-to-reach children. It is home to Africa's highest peak, Kilimanjaro, as well as Serengeti National Park and Olduvai Gorge, an important archaeological site known as "the cradle of civilization."

Tanzania, however, remains an under-developing country, with the bulk of the population surviving on semi-arid terrain as subsistence farmers. Furthermore, the government is also coping with the arrival of 200,000 Burundian refugees.

Tanzania's population is made up of 51% children. According to the most recent Tanzania surveys, only 16% of children are now registered at birth. The number is significantly smaller in rural locations, making it more challenging to identify and assist children in need.

There is tremendous work to help Tanzania's children survive and develop, given high child mortality and a lack of access to essential services.

Tanzania's children seriously need your support. For this purpose, Waremba-Outfitters want you to help raise funds for these children as they are in need of your support. According to the survey:

- One child in every 19 dies before reaching the age of 5, which is eight times the rate in the United States.
- Malnutrition causes stunting in 32% of children.
- 40% of youngsters are out of school, with 24% doing child labour rather than learning.
- 22% of females (ages 15-19) are married, and 1 in every eight females gives birth — with 27% of girls (ages 15+) unable to read and write.

- Poverty affects 23% of the population.
