

New Show New Album and Changing the Narrative of Black Womanhood and Ageism: Keira Wesley Channels Her Pandemic Mindset

New York, New York City, Jun 8, 2021 (Issuewire.com) - Words are like children; just as much as they are yours when they come to you, they mean so much more when you share them.

Writer/Producer Keira Wesley has been up to just that - lending the wisdom of her talents and the joy of her gift to talented artists. Her latest project with hit music producer G. Illsh with sights on Jazmin Sullivan, "Is it Love;" Keira's voice glides over a soft upbeat melody that asks what so many of us have once thought. In her writer's cut of "Is It Love," Keira delivers us a light burden free-falling into the high point of something fresh and exciting! It's giving us very much the return of summer in a post COVID world, carefree girl vibes + happy pure "let me know what I've gotten myself into cause this feels like that stuff they talk about in the movie" type energy.

The feelings we needed!

In her new series, "Looking In," <https://www.facebook.com/LookingInwithKeira> premiering back in May, Keira delivers behind-the-scenes stories and messages from people that we know, as even some who, after hearing their stories you'll want more of, can be found on <https://keirawesley.com/looking-in-with-keira/> her personal Instagram, Keira Wesley or on Facebook Watch, "Looking In with Keira."

"Looking In," in its short docu-series format, feels like reading a good book, a chance for great stories of fantastic people. It's a clever and consumable pick me up. The kind of soul hug that you'd expect Keira to echo into the universe. It's love, it's laughter, and it's a great reason to tune in and exhale from a long day.

Sis is definitely booked and busy!

Media Contact

Miriam Gray

miriamgray91@gmail.com

Source : Looking In with Keira

See on IssueWire