

PixelPlex Updates Details on Its Web Accessibility and Design Services

PixelPlex continues to offer web accessibility consulting and web design development services aimed at helping businesses create ADA compliant web designs.

New York, New York City, Jun 14, 2021 (Issuewire.com) - PixelPlex is a competent web accessibility consultant and service provider looking to make its customers compliant with the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA). The team of developers and consultants can help any business design web pages accessible to every person despite their physical or cognitive limitations. According to the company, there are significant advantages to ensuring that a client has an ADA-compliant web design.

- It's a legal requirement to ensure that businesses are protected from lawsuits arising from non-compliance.
- It makes websites understandable, convenient, and accessible to all, enhancing market reach for businesses.
- Websites have a cleaner, well-tested code both manually and with automated tools. This makes it easy to automate maintenance and code checking.
- Website support across major browsers.

The developers at PixelPlex help create special features such as text zooming, blocking of flickering or content movement, and alternative text for images and controls for visually impaired individuals. There is web design support for persons with hearing impairments, motor, and cognitive disabilities.

For customers who aren't sure if their web design meets the ADA requirements, PixelPlex offers consulting services. They carry out website audits by conducting manual and automated tests. They develop and create an accessible web design with a responsive layout and intuitive controls and finally perform a post-launch accessibility test and give certification.

PixelPlex aids businesses in enhancing user experience in web designs and accessibility across a wide range of audiences. They consider a client's specific needs and business niche to offer a personalized solution. Their web designs are practical yet creative with a mobile-oriented user interface.

By consulting and complying with ADA, businesses receive other benefits like increased traffic, higher ranking in web searches, and improved user retention rates. The company's web design compliance team is continuously updated with the changes in web design laws and requirements, therefore, keeping their clients fully updated at all times. The PixelPlex compliance team also keeps tabs on all their customers after the product launch with tech assistance, support, and regular updates.
