

The Supreme Team is Proud to Announce the Release of No Brady by Rice

Texas, College Station, Jun 22, 2021 (Issuewire.com) - This week, Jerard Rice, AKA Rice will be releasing his latest masterpiece of Hip-Hop, No Brady. The single will be available for streaming worldwide via Spotify and Youtube. No Brady immediately catches your ear with its beautiful production aesthetics. The mix is top-shelf sonically, but the real magic happens when the vocals kick in. Rice's voice exudes a star quality delivering clever lyrics with a signature pop and a near-perfect beat-machine-gun delivery. HOWEVER, when the hook hits, things REALLY light up. "Mmm-Kay let me know when you lit it..." resonates. After the 2nd time through, my brain started to tingle with the realization that this cracky hook would be bouncing around in there for a while.

In the feature spot, J Muzique's voice adds a nice contrasting flavor to Rice's bravado. The two vocalists are playing good cop, bad cop and the listener comes out winning. All-in-all, No Brady is loaded with hooks you simply can't walk away from. Make sure when you stream this track make sure you have some time on your hands because it's probably going to be a long-term relationship. Mmm-Kay? 4 of 5 stars.

About Rice

Jerard Rice, AKA Rice is an up-and-coming artist in New England and co-owner of Hustle Work Grind Record. He is not just a rapper and songwriter, but also an entrepreneur. While music is his passion, he has deep roots in his community and friendships. When asked about how he got started Rice said, "I love meeting new people. A group of us indie artists started the Dear Santa Christmas Extravaganza to give back to our community by providing gifts to kids."

Rice started making music at age 18 with his brother M-Ezy, the other co-owner of Hustle Work Grind Records. Jay-Z. and J Cole are his key influences because of the authenticity of their lyrics. He also claims Kendrick Lamar as an influence for his ability to give everything a pop slant.
