Astrology and gemstones: What they are and how they came to be!

Delhi, New Delhi, Jul 15, 2021 (Issuewire.com) - Khanna Gems explains that the concept of astrology and gemstones is essentially an oriental concept. Alternative sciences and arts have always been a hallmark of oriental thought, and are constituents of one of the many binaries that have traditionally separated our perceptions of the East and the West. Gemstones and precious jewels are loved and adored universally. But while the Western countries have always seen them as ornamental artifacts, or even as the currency of trade in the centuries before, the East has always held gemstones in high regard.

India is a cultural boiling pot, and throughout the plethora of cultures that this country embodies, a fascination for gemstones and heavenly bodies has always existed persistently. Gemstones are considered to symbolize different heavenly bodies and are also considered to be tremendously beneficial to the wearer. Gemstones are said to possess individual auras within them, which are rumored to benefit the auras of the wearers. In astrology, each gemstone is said to possess an aura that is specific to that gemstone, and people usually choose gemstones for themselves depending on the properties of the gemstones. In most cases, however, it is strongly recommended that the potential wearer consults a trained astrologer before purchasing a gemstone for oneself because gemstones can tend to be very particular as far as compatibility is concerned. Different variables go into play while determining the right gemstone for a person, including the religious preference(s) of the person, the sun-sign and moon-sign of the person, the positions and convergence of favorable planets, and so on.

Some gemstones like Diamond- also known as Heera- are worn for general good luck and fame as well, besides its more particular effect of improving and benefiting romantic relationships.

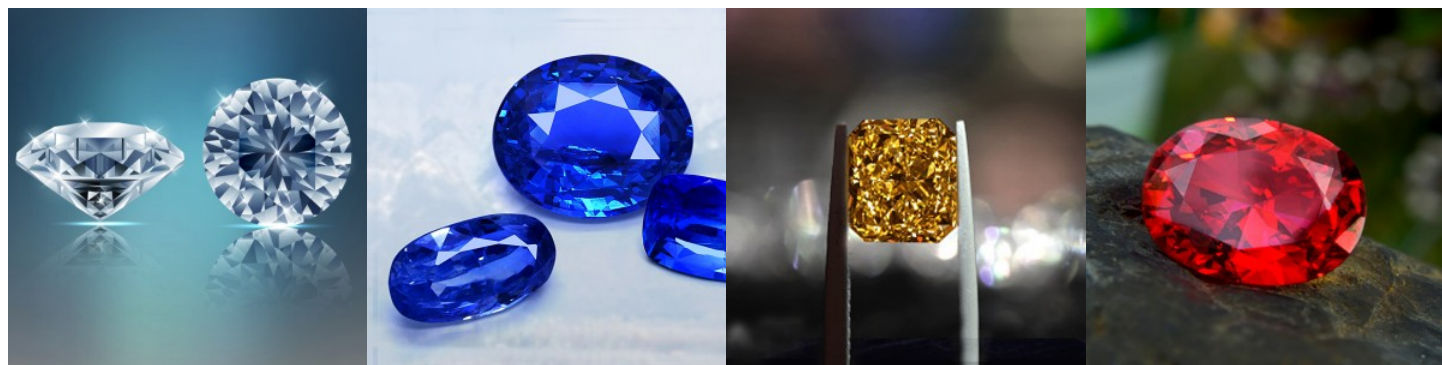

Rubies- which are also locally known as Manik gemstones- are known for their association with the Sun God, and for them being a source of energy and life for the wearer. The gems are also known to improve the concentration and mental acuity of the wearer tremendously.

The Yellow Sapphire or Pukhraj is also one of the most renowned gemstones in India. Despite being the gemstone subject to counterfeiting measures throughout the country (which is a good reason to purchase your gemstone online), yellow sapphires or pukhraj are worn heavily due to the effects they are known to have on issues of kidney and heart.

Emeralds are also to be mentioned when talking about physiological issues. Also known as Panna, the gemstone comes in dazzling shades of green and are known to be effective in resolving disorders of the nervous system, and are known to help their wearers gain concentration.

Perhaps the most famous (or infamous) gemstone on the list would probably be the Blue Sapphire. Also known as Neelam in the local dialect, the gemstone has enjoyed cult status in not only India but popular cultures throughout the world. Many cultures consider the gemstone to be extremely powerful and contain magical powers within itself. Known to be the gemstone of Saturn or 'Shani', the Blue Sapphire is known to counteract the negative impacts of the planet. But as powerful as it is, the Neelam is fit to be worn by very few and can spell disaster for those who dare to wear it while not being compatible with it.

There are many issues one can obsess over before proceeding to purchase a precious stone, including the gemstone price, but perhaps the most important part is determining the gemstone that is meant for you. The key is in trusting only established gemstone retailers and distributors who deal in authentic gemstones. Before all of this, however, comes the first step of consulting an astrologer that is fit to guide you towards the gemstone you should purchase and wear.
