

Redemption is the name of the game for "Jack and Diane"

Tom Sizemore signs on to play lead

California, Los Angeles, Jul 27, 2021 (IssueWire.com) - Redemption is the name of the game for filmmakers, Bruce Bellocchi and Rick Gellar. The childhood friends reconnected after thirty years and formed, "The Kennedy Entertainment Group", named after the high school they both attended. Gellar, whose life after high school led to college and a successful career as a trial attorney always had a knack for writing and a love of the arts. When he teamed with Bellocchi who had several projects in development, it seemed like a match made in heaven. "We compliment each other perfectly", Gellar said in a recent interview.

The company's first project is a feature film called, "The Legend of Jack and Diane" which is slated for production in early 2022. You may have heard of it as it's gained some serious momentum since being announced several months back. And speaking of redemption, remember bad boy actor, Tom Sizemore? (Saving Private Ryan, Black Hawk Down) He's just signed on to play one of the lead roles. Bruce Bellocchi, who directed the film said there was never another choice to play the "rough around the edges" Detective Parker. "Sizemore is one of the great actors of our generation and life is all about redemption and fighting through hard times. My partner and I know all about fighting through hard times. Sizemore fits right in and we couldn't have more respect for the guy."

The film stars, newcomers Lydia Zelmec as "Diane Peterson" and Noah LaLonde as "Jack O'Brian". The film also stars everyone's favorite bad guy, Robert LaSardo who was last seen in "The Mule" opposite Clint Eastwood. "The Legend of Jack and Diane" is Scheduled out in late 2022.
