Philippines medical college fees would range anywhere between Rs 12-20 Lakhs for the complete medical course. Even though some of the medical colleges/universities in the Philippines have low fees, one should not choose the Philippines medical Education is only on the basis of the tuition fees. The quality of medical education as well the facilities would also be less when the fees are less.

The Philippines is having many outstanding Universities. The Philippines holds the highest literacy rate @ 94% in Asia! That means the majority of people in the Philippines are educated, class.

That makes the country commendable and safe to go for studying medicine.

English is an international language that is used by the majority of countries in the world as either the first or the second language.

In our country also it is used as a second language matching international norms after our native language Hindi.

The Philippines is also not behind as it is the world's third-largest English-speaking country. English is the mode of instruction in all levels of education, and the same for MBBS in the Philippines.

It is safe for both Boys and Girls. The Philippines is a mix of different cultures which makes this country a friendly country, giving the students an extra edge to be not treated as outside people or foreigners. The students who study here feel relaxed with the friendly environment of the country and focus better on their studies.

The Philippines is known worldwide for its medicine study. Since privatization took place very early in the Philippines most medicine universities were privatized.
