Market Dynamics

Parents are looking for premium diaper products to offer better protection and safety. Ongoing advancements in the fabric used in a diaper, for extra absorption capability, leak-proof, and special user-friendly features of diapers along with various initiatives by manufacturers to increase their customer base is propelling the global baby diapers market.

Further, the availability of diapers through e-commerce channels along with the rise in disposable income is boosting the market. Moreover, diaper banks have a significant effect on creating health awareness among consumers.

However, children who wear diapers may experience skin irritation, commonly referred to as diaper rash, which can irritate the skin and can cause painful redness.

Also, declining birth rates are expected to hamper the global baby diapers market. According to World Data, over the past 50 years, the global fertility rate has halved, and the global average fertility rate is just below 2.5 children per woman in 2019.

Market Segmentation

Based on product the global baby diapers market is broadly segmented as cloth diapers, disposable diapers, biodegradable diapers, training nappies, and others. Among all these disposable diapers accounted for the major market in 2018. Disposable diapers are made up of super absorbent which is a moisture-absorbing gel, which soaks the waste and keeps the layer dry. Parents mostly prefer these due to the ease of use and with lightweight and multilayer sheets to provide an extra layer of protection and to offer convenience. Also, owing to developing disposable diapers, companies are also focusing on recycling disposable diapers. Leading companies are taking various initiatives by developing plants that recycle disposable diapers.

However, over the forecast period, biodegradable diapers are expected to grow at a high pace over the forecast period. Rising preference towards using high-quality, eco-friendly products is the major factor boosting the biodegradable diapers demand across the globe. Also, to reduce the harmful effects of chemicals used in disposable diapers. Further, a combination of biodegradable and cloth diapers is projected to attract a higher number of customers. This hybrid diaper is made up of natural materials and cloth-like material, which create an absorbency layer, and can be used as a disposable diaper.
