The newly opened Steam page offers the first overview of Super People for global players. With detailed specifications, a comprehensive game introduction, and some new intel about the game mechanics and world, players can see what the game will offer upon launch. Those who want to join the community can also head over to the Community Hub and meet players from all corners of the world before they drop into Orbisland and the world of Super People!

The opening of the Steam page also coincides with the end of Super People's Alpha Test, which ran from August 11 to August 23. With a gathering of many applicants and active game matches during the test period, the success of the Alpha Test showcased the potential of Super People and its place as a next-generation FPS battle royale.

"It was great to see all the players having fun and enjoying the game that we've been working tirelessly on," an official at Wonder People said. "We're seeing some great feedback and reports from our community, and we're taking many of them into consideration to further improve Super People. We want to meet the high expectations of players from all over the world at launch."
