This year’s tour will showcase more than a dozen houses designed by renowned architect Charles Goodman, FAIA, whose iconic designs feature walls of glass, open floor plans, unique angles, and wide chimneys. Visitors will also get an exclusive look at a rare Goodman-designed Alcoa Care-free home, which is currently being meticulously restored. In addition to architecture, visitors will experience mid-century interior design, sculpture gardens, and the neighborhood’s unique seamless landscape designed by renowned landscape architects Dan Kiley, Bernard Voigt, and Eric Paepcke. Architects and landscape designers will be on hand during the tour to provide design insights, and internationally recognized artists will showcase their sculptural works.

For the first time, the Hollin Hills House + Garden Tour will also offer events celebrating the mid-century modern period. In the morning, visitors can peruse dozens of vintage and antique automobiles during a “Cars and Coffee” event. An exclusive morning yoga session will also be offered to all attendees. Additionally, the modern furniture art collective DCDC+30 will showcase select works by some of today’s most cutting-edge furniture designers.

Hollin Hills is a 326-acre neighborhood south of Old Town Alexandria that was built from the late 1940s to the early 1970s. While Charles and Ray Eames, Richard Neutra, Eero Saarinen, and others were designing modern case study houses for California to meet the growing housing demand following WWII, Charles Goodman was breaking the mold in Virginia designing modern homes for Hollin Hills. The subdivision—comprised of more than 450 houses—is a sharp contrast to the brick-colonial neighborhoods that surround it. Capitalizing on the area’s landscape, Goodman uniquely positioned each home for its individual viewpoint. Today, Hollin Hills is recognized for its architectural and design vision. It’s listed on the National Register of Historic Places and is a Virginia Landmark Historic District.
