An internist is a doctor of internal medicine. They're doctors who specialize in the internal organs and systems of the body, but they are not limited to those areas. They can also give preventive care and treat anything from skin rashes to ear infections. They only treat adults and they aren't surgeons. Many internists treat people for a wide variety of illnesses. They're called general internists, and they typically see people in their office. They manage chronic illnesses and often they have long-lasting relationships with their patients.
