

Viewpoint (Dennis Quaid) Continues To Feature Content In The Field Of Medicine

California, Los Angeles, Sep 3, 2021 (Issuewire.com) - As an educational program that has a history of educating consumers, Viewpoint with Dennis Quaid has continued to produce and promote content that features a wide range of medical modalities. In the past year, the program has looked at Mental Health treatment, Cancer-Fighting Technologies, Advances in Cardiovascular Surgery, Fighting COVID and other micro-bacterial illnesses, and many more. The development team has been able to secure this content by working with some of the thought leaders in their respective fields, who have all contributed their expertise to the short-form program that runs on stations nationwide.

Said a "Viewpoint" spokesperson, "we have been extremely fortunate in our efforts to secure some of the top medical minds from around the world, and also many underrepresented voices in various fields, in an effort to have truly comprehensive education across our platform. Viewpoint with Dennis Quaid was developed specifically to highlight leaders and help inform audiences, in this case, on the medical progress available to consumers."

One episode of the ongoing series will highlight Cardiovascular Care and Solutions. As many know, there have been huge advances in cardiovascular surgery over the last thirty years. However, many may believe that the most recent technologies are only available in certain metropolitan hubs. Viewpoint

Dennis Quaid was able to work with rural healthcare providers to discuss how healthcare, and specifically cardiovascular care, has become more available to many rural providers. Additionally, some of the most talented surgeons and specialists in the world are relocating to rural regions.

An additional component of the series will feature how companies have adjusted their processes during the COVID-19 pandemic. This will include the additional sterilization of shared spaces, creating airflows to mitigate contamination, and additional cleanliness practices in order to ensure safe working spaces, especially for healthcare workers. These technologies are being featured by Viewpoint with Dennis Quaid not only to show how their operational protocols can affect the healthcare industry but how overall sanitation and cleanliness can potentially reduce infection of illnesses like the flu and COVID.

Another aspect of public education on television in the realm of health is to communicate some of the major increases in depression, anxiety, and other related symptoms over the last five years, and especially in the last year and a half. Viewpoint (Dennis Quaid) worked on a singular segment in the series to discuss how mental health treatment is becoming more and more prevalent. As de-stigmatization continues, the hope is that anyone who needs counseling or medical attention due to their mental health can be seen by the appropriate parties in an expeditious manner. In order to create this content, they invited mental health professionals to shed light on new options for treatment, digital “distance” healthcare, and other distinct categories of treatment and overall efficacy to help theorize the future of the mental health professions.

Medical care continues to be a huge priority for audiences around the world. Fortunately, Viewpoint Dennis Quaid can provide many intriguing stories that will illuminate some of these sectors, and also showcase individual specialists in their respective mediums. Viewpoint will continue to seek out contributors to the platform and showcase patient stories, technological breakthroughs, and exceptional ideas that are permeating the medical industry.

The creative team behind the Viewpoint program has worked in the realm of educational television for over twenty years, in addition to feature documentary production and high-end commercial content provision. The producers of the program ensure the educational angle of each story in order to accurately portray the current state of medicine in their pieces. The team of videographers, editors, and writers have cumulatively won over one hundred Telly awards, in addition to others, and have received commendations from a variety of distributors and collaborators. The program is hosted by veteran actor Dennis Quaid, whose contributions to the world of entertainment over the last forty years are singularly unique and impressive. Ranging from family dramas to high-intensity thrillers, Quaid’s career and screen presence give true weight to the Viewpoint platform.
