Florida, Orlando, Oct 4, 2021 (Issuewire.com) - The Low T 99 telehealth service is a new way for men to get evaluated and treated for low testosterone symptoms from the comfort of their homes.

“Testosterone deficiency has a prevalence of 10%-40% among adult males...” according to a 2020 report by Kristie L. Kahl in Urology Times-Journal.

Now, men across Florida are able to schedule an appointment with a licensed physician using the LowT99 digital platform, which will take them through a series of questions about their health history.

After answering these questions, patients are able to speak with the doctor on video chat or phone call about their treatment options. This allows more convenience in terms of scheduling appointments as well as personalized care based on individual needs. A major benefit of this app is that it provides medical consultation at no charge--patients only pay a minimal lab processing fee for their comprehensive blood work- which is securely delivered to a LowT99 network of Men's Health doctors.

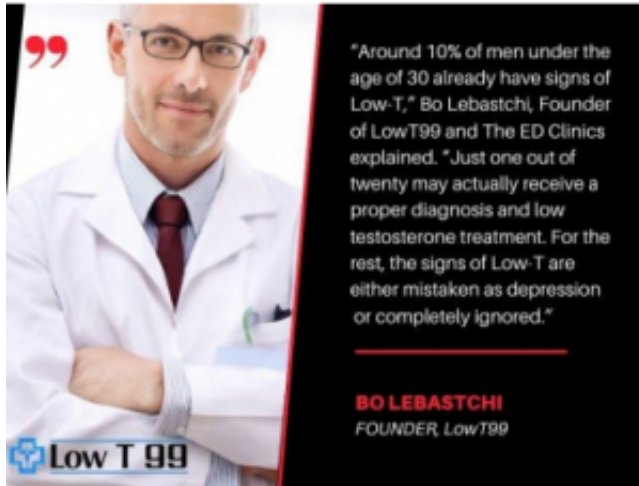

"Around 10% of men under the age of 30 already have signs of Low-T," Founder of LowT99 and The ED Clinics explained. "Just one out of twenty may actually receive a proper diagnosis and low testosterone treatment. For the rest, the signs of Low-T are either mistaken as depression or completely ignored."

Testosterone is a natural hormone produced by a man's body. In our prime men's testosterone production is high, which can alter muscle mass, hair growth, and libido, or sex drive. It's not atypical for a man's testosterone levels to drop as we get older. Low testosterone levels, clinically known as hypogonadism, can cause a number of difficult symptoms for men, such as Weight increase, everyday exhaustion, loss of muscle mass, lack of stamina or endurance to do tasks, needing naps after work or meals, low sex drive, and erectile dysfunction.
