About Book

Calcutta, 1943. India, under the British Raj, is a virtual police state. To maintain 'order', the Raj seeks out loyalists and cultivates them to keep an eye out for troublemakers. Prof. Amal Ghosh, a well-known playwright and a darling of the British Raj, is being assessed as a potential collaborator and gets entangled in a labyrinth of lies and deception.

What misfortune would gravitate him towards anti-British activities inspired by Netaji Subhas and turn him into a suspect? How would Ghosh emerge unscathed to become a government minister post-independence? And what damning discovery would he make about his past life?

The answers to these questions would be revealed in this journey of surveillance, self-realization, and gratitude.
