

Zoom into the Real FPS Game Global Beta Test for CROWZ

Seoul, South Korea Nov 7, 2021 (Issuewire.com) - Korean game publisher ThumbAge announced the Global Beta Test for their upcoming FPS (First-Person Shooter) game, “CROWZ Squad Operation”.

Selected players who have pre-registered for the test can drop into intense battles against other players from November 14th. To further enhance the gaming experience, the Beta Test will feature a single game mode called “Blood Zone” and a Sellrain Valley map for massive play.

CROWZ is a massive free-to-play, tactical-action PvP shooter game. Currently, it has two game modes: a survival and escape mode called “Squad Operation” and a massive team battle mode called Blood Zone.

The first Beta Test involves testing the Blood Zone mode, which allows up to 64 players on the battlefield. In the Blood Zone mode, the rules are quite simple: Capture landmarks and push enemy forces back to their base. Once you capture the landmarks, the mining machine will work for your team. The more captured landmarks, the more points to mining outputs, which will lead the team to victory.

The debut game of ROYALCROW game studio, CROWZ adds a twist to the FPS and battle royale genre with gameplay components that have been designed to allow for more strategic and tactical battles.

“We are extremely excited to announce the Global Beta Test of our new FPS game CROWZ, which we are working hard to release for our fans,” said Hong-Suh Park, the CEO of ThumbAge. “CROWZ will provide a variety of entertainment by maximizing the fun of exploring the map and collecting items, which will introduce a lot of thrilling twists and turns to every battle.”
