

A short story of Ameer Vayalar, youngest Taekwondo international Coach

Ameer Vayalar is India's youngest international coach in Taekwondo, an Olympic competition and Korean martial art. He is represented India in many international competitions, and has been ranked in the World Rankings and Olympic Rankings.

Vayalar, Kerala Dec 26, 2021 (Issuewire.com) - Ameer Vayalar is India's youngest international coach in Taekwondo, Korean martial art, and a competitive sport in many international competitions such as the Olympics, Asian Games, and School Games. Ameer has been a coach since he was in 10th class. Taekwondo training started in the seventh class of Vayalar Rama Varma Higher Secondary School. He has been representing Kerala in national championships since the ninth standard. In 2013, he withdrew from the competition due to an injury sustained during the matches. In subsequent competitions, he worked as a coach, referee, and organizer. He was also the head coach of several state and national competitions, including the University of Kerala. He returned to the competition in 2019 and represented the Indian team at the International G1 Taekwondo Championships in Hyderabad, securing a clear place in the Olympic rankings and world rankings in the same competition. Many of the children who train under the Emir have established a clear place in state and national competitions, and one of his main goals is to train taekwondo with world-class equipment PSS(Protection Scoring System) to bring their skills to the world level.

Media Contact

vlr ads

vayalarads@gmail.com

Source : vlr ads

See on IssueWire