Sydney, New South Wales Dec 4, 2021 (Issuewire.com) - Writing a CDR Report is essential for those who want to immigrate to Australia. A CDR is also known as a competency demonstration report which is used to get engineering employment in Australia. It is a technical document that has three elements a CPD, three career episodes, and a summary statement. Before you start writing your career episodes, you must choose the occupational category stated by Engineers Australia. Your every career episode must focus on different facets of your engineering activities. You need to mention how you applied your knowledge and skills in the nominated occupation. You must write your episodes' narrative in Australian English and your own words. You need to provide a continuing professional development report in a list format.

Engineers Australia (EA), the authoritative and assessing body in Australia, assesses your engineering document. You will only get positive skills assessment if EA finds your document suitable that meets the required competencies and skills. You need to write CDR Report Engineers Australia complying with the migration skills assessment guidelines. Your document must be plagiarism-free and free from grammatical mistakes, spellings, and punctuation. You need to have all your required documents ready to apply for migration skills assessment. You must have English language proficiency as the assessor assesses your English language competencies.
