

TutorBin focusses on aiding international students from the Middle East

Dubai, United Arab Emirates Dec 13, 2021 (IssueWire.com) - The Middle East has emerged as one of the largest sources for international students in countries like the USA, the UK, and Australia. This growth has been supported by individual efforts and also various governments supporting their students to get an international education. Many nations such as Saudi Arabia, UAE, Qatar, Kuwait, Oman, and others are operating large initiatives to support their students. There is a growing recognition of the long-term benefits of getting an education from leading universities.

As per OECD Statistics of 2019, the Middle East was the 3rd largest contributor for international students, just after China and India. In proportion to the population, it is a huge number. Saudi Arabia is the leading country in the region for international students. The trend is likely to continue.

The students from the region face unique challenges when they move abroad. Any new university takes time to get used to. Also, there are changes in culture, living environment, language, methodology, tools, and techniques, which make it a lot harder. TutorBin has developed unique expertise in assisting the students from the region in their international education.

The students from the region learn differently in their schooling years. TutorBin has tutors that meet the learning needs and preferences of the students and help them get used to the new education system in their universities. They also assist them with homework, assignments, laboratory work, projects, essay writings, live sessions, and video solutions. The company also has faculty members with Arabic, Persian, and other languages, apart from English that helps in easy transformation.
