Learn the Basics of a CCTV System Vancouver BC and Surrey

Closed-circuit television, or CCTV, is a surveillance system put in place to record video of a particular area. You might want to direct a camera at your front door or the reception desk of your business. CCTV systems send video footage to a monitor, where you can then review it to check for suspicious activity. These security cameras are capable of keeping a 24/7 watch on your property, whether residential or commercial.

Keep Your Property Safe from Criminals Vancouver BC and Surrey

Crime prevention is among the most common rationales for installing a home security system with CCTV cameras. These cameras capture real-time footage, meaning you'll be able to surveillance your entire property at any hour of the day. You'll know immediately if there's a break-in or instance of vandalism. If a crime does occur, CCTV provides valuable evidence in a court case. Judges may be able to use the footage to make their decision, and video surveillance is crucial to helping police identify the perpetrator in the first place.

Getting a Full View of Your Home or Business Vancouver BC and Surrey

We've touched on this in the previous point, but we can't overstate the importance of the comprehensive surveillance CCTV offers. You can have a full view of your home or business with little to no blind spots in your vantage point. You can keep an eye out for potential criminals and all other suspicious activity, often stopping a bad situation before it happens.

Hold Your Employees Accountable Vancouver BC and Surrey

Unfortunately, sometimes threats to your business come from the inside. Employee theft isn't uncommon, and you could lose a significant amount of money and assets from these incidents. If your employees are aware of CCTV cameras in the workplace, they may be less likely to steal and more likely to be productive during the workday. CCTV cameras have also been known to prevent other employee-related instances, including sexual harassment and violence.

Cut Security Costs with CCTV Vancouver BC and Surrey

Contrary to what you may believe, investing in CCTV cameras for your home or business can actually save you money. You won't need to spend your hard-earned cash on additional security-related costs when you already have a state-of-the-art system from Cloud1security. If you're a business owner, you can cut down on security personnel without sacrificing the safety of your employees and your assets. Plus, there are very few maintenance costs associated with CCTV.

Save on Your Insurance Policy Vancouver BC and Surrey

Your insurance company will thank you for installing a security system and CCTV cameras in your home or business! In fact, security plays a significant role in your insurance company's evaluation of your property. Because CCTV cameras can drastically reduce the risk of crime at your home or business, your insurance provider may feel inclined to decrease your rates.
