

Florida Community Christian College joins the Independent Junior College Athletic Association

Florida Community Christian College, located in Tampa, Florida joins the IJCAA.

Tampa, Florida Feb 18, 2022 (Issuewire.com) - Every college football team that made it big once started small, and that is exactly what is taking place right now. For the longest time, opportunities to play and get in touch with one's athletic side had been centralized on well-known schools, leaving other institutions on the sidelines.

Several institutions constantly push for better quality education for all. Florida Community Christian College (FCC) is an academic institution that was established in 2019. FCC gives students opportunities to hone and showcase their skills, and develop academically and athletically. FCC's curriculum is through online learning and offers degree programs in business administration, early childhood development, and sports management

Florida Community Christian College football and basketball programs join the JAA junior college program, Miami Collegiate, and MTB Collegiate as a member of the Independent Junior College Athletic Association (IJCAA).

The Independent Junior College Athletic Association (IJCAA) is an athletic association that is made up of various junior colleges and community colleges. It was founded in 2021 and has 5 member schools already. The IJCAA promotes, develops, and further hones junior college athletics by giving member institutions the chance to participate in college sports at the varsity level.

The IJCAA sponsors football, men's basketball, Women's basketball, Soccer, volleyball, track and field, and baseball. Regardless of what institution a student-athlete is in, they will still retain the eligibility to play if they decide to transfer into another IJCAA, NJCAA, NAIA, or NCAA school.

Now that the Florida Community Christian (FCC) has offered College football and basketball programs, For other information about the Florida Community Christian (FCC) and their newest program, you can visit <https://fccspartans.com>.
