Dating can be tricky, especially if you're busy and want to avoid scammers. With work, family, and all of the other commitments in life, it can be hard to find time to go out and meet people.

If you'd like to try a dating service that will do the legwork for you, give suredate.net (a concierge dating service) a try. You'll still have some level of control over your dates - from how many matches you want per month to how far you're willing to travel, the services offers options and customized plans so that you can finally start seeing the results you've been looking for.

What are concierge dating services?

A service that offers professional and personal relationship advice for busy single professionals. Using their expertise to provide insight into local venues (as well as those far away), they help match people based on their personality rather than just their looks. Unlike online sites or traditional matchmaking groups, with a concierge service, singles can take their time deciding if they want to connect with another person. They can ask questions and get answers – before ever meeting someone in person.
