Content Delivery Services are the transparent backbone of the Internet and are responsible for providing the content. Whether we know it or not, each interacts with a CDN daily; when you read news articles, shop online, watch YouTube videos or browse social media feeds.

What do you understand about the Content Delivery Platform?

A Content Delivery Platform is a software solution that collects content from existing sources, converts it into actionable information, and makes it accessible to processes and applications.

Collection - Content is drawn from various sources: text documents structured and unstructured records.

Transformation - To become usable information, content is transformed into fine-tuned elements, reconciled, and enriched.

Delivery - Applications and processes access information in personalized and contextual ways.

Optimized Content - Consumption is analyzed to increase engagement proactively.

Benefits

Rather than replacement or modification, the CDP complements environments and other applications that create, store, and manage content. However, since these applications are often designed for a specific purpose, they are not suitable for fueling other channels by adapting content to the target end-point.

Content Delivery Platforms address this need and the complexity of delivering processes and applications differently with content from multiple sources:

It generates a single access point to unify all facts essential to clear up unique business demanding situations throughout the enterprise.

Consistency is brought to content formats and metadata.

It applies security rules tailored to delivery scenarios and user profiles, centrally controlled.

It allows distribution across multiple channels.
