

26 Year Old Heart Disease Survivor Founded His Own Computer Company, Truncus Computers

Huntington Beach, California Mar 21, 2022 (Issuewire.com) - Ryan Delcoure was born with a rare heart defect called "Truncus Arteriosus" and needed major open-heart surgery days later. He has survived four open-heart surgeries. He started TruncusCo because he was always fascinated by how things work. He told us, "I'm definitely a tinkerer", " , especially with technology." His vision is to change the world into a better place with technology. His goals are to make devices to save other kids and young adults with his technology, making powerful, eco-friendly devices at an affordable rate. His quote as a kid was "Lights, Fans, How does it work?" His inspirations growing up were Steve Jobs, Steve Wozniak, Bill Gates, Kevin O'Leary, and later on Palmer Luckey. He always watched Shark Tank with his mom and sister every Friday when it came on. His favorite shark on the show is Kevin O'Leary. His company is based around the human heart, user-friendliness, straight to the point, and looking at life from another perspective. He strives to give back and be the best. He never settles for less, never gives up on anything, and wants to make a difference in people's lives. One byte at a time.

Media Contact

Truncus Computers

truncusco@gmail.com

714-472-3241

Source : Truncus Computers

See on IssueWire